

MARRIED LIFE, THE SECOND YEAR

By MABEL HERBERT URNER.

"Of course you're going! Now don't be a little fool." And Warren struggled into the overcoat he had been vigorously brushing.

It was Tuesday morning and this was the first reference that had been made to the Tuesday night dinner since Helen had declared last week she would not go.

"But I thought you said Mrs. Dalton's cousin—that good-looking girl—would take my place?"

He laughed carelessly. "As though anyone could do that!"

It was not so often now that Warren made so gallant a remark.

"But I don't like those Bohemian places, and I don't like the Daltons," she protested, though plainly weakening.

"Well, I go to many places and with many people I don't like when it's a matter of policy—as it is now, Dalton is keen on our going. They're coming by for us in their car about 6:30. So be all ready. I'll be home at 6."

She disapproves of Dalton.

And without waiting for further protests he hurried off.

Of course, she reasoned, as she bathed and dressed the baby. If Warren really insisted on going with the Daltons, it was better for her to go with him. But more and more she felt that Will Dalton was bad for Warren. And the thought that Warren should feel under obligations to him for tips on the stock market rankled within her constantly.

But when, at 6:30, the Daltons dashed up for him with their touring car, and they were whirled down the gleaming avenue, Helen nestled back among the fur rugs with a sense of pleasure in the swift motion and the luxurious ease of the car.

Their destination was an Italian "table d'hôte" just off Sixth av. The place was crowded. The air was close and heavy with cigarette smoke. And above the clatter of dishes and noise of the diners came the sound of a tortured piano and a strident violin.

A perspiring waiter led them to a table that Mr. Dalton had telephoned to have reserved. It was the only vacant in the place.

"Here, wait a moment!" called Dalton, imperiously, as the waiter rushed off. "Bring us four Madrid cocktails—right away!"

"Yes, dry?" "I guess that's right—'isn't it?" looking around the table inquiringly. "It takes so everlastingly long to get anything here—I wanted to give the waiter a little before he got away. But perhaps Mrs. Curtis doesn't care for cocktails?" remembering the other evening, and turning to Helen apologetically.

"The Best You Have,"

"Oh, yes; that's all right," smiled Helen, graciously. For she had resolved to accept whatever the others did. She need not drink it, but she could not be constantly protesting at every order.

The food was not bad, although Helen was suspicious as to just how clean things were. Everybody instinctively wiped their silver with their napkins. And Mr. Dalton, who served the soup from a big steaming bowl placed before him, calmly wiped out each soup plate before filling it.

"Take those away," he demanded as the waiter placed a pint bottle of the traditional "red ink" beside each plate, "and bring us some good champagne—the best you have. And here—hold on a minute! Bring us some of those bread sticks, too!" with the air of a man determined to be well served.

"Not bad soup," commented Warren.

"Wait till the spaghetti comes on—that's the drawing card here. But in town, I think—like if you like, I'll turn it over to Helen."

"You do—don't you, Mrs. Curtis?" turning anxiously to Helen.

She assured him that she did, although there was nothing she disliked so much.

Here a young woman in a black spangled gown and with a bit of coral plaster placed effectively on her painted cheek, mounted the platform beside the piano and sang a popular song. The chief quality of her voice was loudness, and it wrapped hopefully with the clatter of dishes and the general din.

A song she loved.

Then a shallow, pimple-faced, dissipated-looking youth in rumpled dress suit sang "The Rosary," Helen shuddered. She loved that song, but to hear it sung by that man in that way gave her a sense of revulsion.

Suddenly she realized that he was looking directly at her and singing with an adoring look. She dropped her eyes, furiously indignant and with a feeling of physical repulsion. And rigidly she held her gaze to her plate until the song was over.

Just then there was a lull in the music, and from the next table this bit of conversation came to them very clearly.

"I can't see why anybody wants to drink that red ink." It was a girl's voice.

"Oh, that's a disinfectant they serve with the dinner to kill the germs," answered the man with her. "I say, old man, that's just what I said Dalton, turning around and addressing the man who made the comment.

"Oh, it's not original," he laughed back. "I've heard that before."

Helen was constantly being surprised at the lack of convention, the easy formality of it all. People commented back and forth from table to table with the greatest unconcern.

She tried to enjoy it, to enter into the spirit of things as Warren had told her she must—but she found it very hard. What was the charm of it all? What did people find in it to call "Bohemian" and to so eagerly seek? Eating a poorly served dinner in a badly ventilated room while they listened to atrocious music! And yet the place was packed, and they said it was this way every night.

But at last it was over, and they were whirling back in the Daltons' big easy car, with the fur rugs tucked about them.

Helen shifted the fresh, cold air gratefully.

"Oh, this seems so good after that close, overheated place," she could not help but say.

"I am afraid," Mrs. Curtis is not a good Bohemian," laughed Mrs. Dalton.

"Then we'll make her one," declared Mr. Dalton, as the car stopped before the door. "We're going to have a lot of these little jaunts together, eh, Curtis?"

"To be sure we are," asserted Warren heartily, as the car stopped before the door. And Helen could only smile a faint assent as she answered their merry "Good nights."

SAVED HIS FOOT.

H. D. Ely, of Bantam, O., suffered from horrible ulcer on his foot for four years. Doctor advised amputation, but he refused and reluctantly tried Bucklen's Arnica Salve as a last resort. He then wrote: "I used your salve and my foot was soon completely cured." Best remedy for burns, cuts, bruises and eczema. Get a box today. Only 25c. Recommended by all druggists.—Adv.

CHANGE CAN ONLY BE MADE BY CONVENTION

Only Power the Republican Committee Has Is to Issue Call for the Sessions.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—Power to change the basis of representation in the republican national convention does not lie with the republican national committee, though the committee has the power to call an intermediate convention to act upon the question.

This was determined Tuesday by the law committee of the national committee after an all day discussion of various questions referred to it preparatory to the meeting of the national committee here next month to reconsider reorganization of the party.

TELEPHONE COMPANY ACCUSED BY POSTAL

Telegraph Company Charges Messages Are Diverted to the Western Union Company.

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 12.—The Indiana Public Utilities commission Tuesday heard the complaint of the Postal Telegraph company against the Central Union Telephone company, which, the telegraph company alleges, diverts messages meant for the Postal to the Western Union Telegraph company.

The Postal company asks that the telephone company be compelled to abolish the telephone call words "Post 1" and "Western Union" and recognize only the numbers for cities.

C. C. Adams, vice president of the Postal company, and R. H. Overbaugh, counsel for the company, are here from New York for the hearing.

BACKACHE A WARNING YOU SHOULD HEED

It is One of Nature's First Signs of Kidney Troubles, if Neglected, Serious Diseases May Follow.

When the kidneys are clogged up and inactive, nature has a way of warning you.

Backache is one of the first symptoms. You may also be troubled with disagreeable, annoying bladder disorders; have attacks of lumbago or rheumatism; become nervous, tired and feel all worn out; puffiness under the eyes or in the feet and ankles; and many other symptoms are noticed. If they are neglected, dropsy, diabetes, or Bright's Disease, which so often prove fatal, may result.

It is not only dangerous, but needless for you to suffer and endure the tortures of these troubles, when a little Croxone now will quickly and surely end all such misery.

There is no more effective remedy known for all such troubles than Croxone, because it reaches the cause. It soaks right into the kidneys, through the walls and linings; cleans and clogs up the pores; neutralizes and dissolves the poisonous uric acid and waste matter that lodge in the joints and muscles and cause those terrible rheumatic pains, and makes the kidneys filter and and suit the poison out of the blood and drive it from the system.

You will find Croxone different from all other remedies. It is practically impossible to take it without results.

An original package costs but a trifle, and all druggists are authorized to return the purchase price if Croxone should fail in a single case. Three doses a day for a few days is often all that is ever needed to end the worst backache, relieve rheumatic pains, or overcome urinary disorders.

GEN. BOOTH DID NOT PAY FOR REGAL SUITE

ELKHART, Ind., Nov. 12.—"I notice," said Ensign D. F. Peacock of the Salvation army, Tuesday, "that a story about Gen. Booth says he arrived in the $800 regal suite on the Lusitania. This might lead one to think the general was of extravagant tastes. He is not. His use of the magnificent suite on the liner did not cost him anything above the ordinary passage fee. We have been officially notified that the ship has been prepared for sailing and it was found no one had engaged the regal suite for that voyage, the vessel's management extended to Gen. Booth the hospitality of free use of the suite."

OFFICERS ARE HOME.

That there is nothing to reports that Gov. Ralston is holding the troops at Indianapolis awaiting the outcome of the Mexican situation is the declaration of Lieut. Otto E. YOUNG MEN AND ALL MEN, COME TO SEE ME. Let me remove your trouble, purify your blood, strengthen your nervous system and restore you to a healthy, manly feeling, thereby relieving you of the burden that is felt from any disease. My practice is limited to these diseases, and each case I accept is identical with some disease I have cured. Therefore it is no more than reasonable for me to expect to do as much for you as I have done for others. After treating with me for just a little while you will have as much confidence as I have in my methods.

Dr. Fleener's Remedies Save Men

I want to tell every young man what his father should have told him in his youth. What every young man and father ought to know. No sadder spectacle ever comes to my attention than a young man whose body and mind is infected with disease. He is handicapped all through life. The strong, robust man with pure blood cells passes him at every turn in the race of life. Thousands of these cases should never have been. An ounce of prevention would have kept the young man of today and the father of tomorrow in the bloom of health, strength and vigor. Failure is as certain to follow a weakened and diseased mind as day will follow night. Don't you believe the great men of today, of yesterday, performed every private and public duty fearlessly and earnestly? Then why should you not guard your HERITAGE when it is worth more to you, more to your children and your children's children than all the money the Rockefeller and Vanderbilts possess? Your success depends upon your health and determination. All of these things being true, loan me your confidence and I will guarantee you success and health. This I will accomplish by making a strong man of you—a healthy man, a man with strong nerves, clear brain and a sound body—a man with good, pure blood coursing through your veins, free from disease germs, taint or infection. False pride and modesty have stood between thousands of men and success, health and happiness.

What the blood stream won't do in the human system for weak organs will never be accomplished. Are you willing to hand your HERITAGE down from generation to generation through your children? Look about you at the thousands of unsuccessful suffering men who are paying the price of their ancestors' indiscretion. Have you inherited bad blood or have you contracted it as some unsuspecting moment? Begin now to stamp it out by taking the best blood making and blood purifying remedies.
